Criteria for Honorary Awards

- 1 Recipients of honorary awards should meet at least one of the criteria from each section outlined above.
- 2 Whilst it is likely that most recipients of honorary awards will have attained maturity of years in order to demonstrate their worthiness, there is value in recognising people who are likely to make further contributions in their career.
- 3 Care should be taken to avoid any conflict of interest. An award should not be read as reciprocating a gift or political intervention on behalf of the University neither should there be any risk of embarrassment to either the honoree or the University as a consequence of the award being made.
- 4 A reasonable test of a candidate's suitability, for honorary awards at any level, should be the ability to fit with the community of honorary award recipients at the University.
