Scenario One

A child likes to sing and has been offered a solo in the class play. They are very anxious about performing, so are not sure whether to take this opportunity or not. What should they do?

Scenario Two

A child is a reserve for the school rounders team. On the day of a game against another school, they are given the opportunity to play, as another child has had to go home sick. They are afraid they will let their team down, so are not feeling very positive about this opportunity. What should they do?

Scenario Three

A child has been selected by their teacher to attend a writing workshop with an author at another school. They love writing stories, but none of their friends have been invited, so they don’t really want to go. What should they do?

Scenario Four

A child has the opportunity to go on a school residential trip, which will mean staying away from home for three days. It looks a lot of fun and all their friends are going, but they have never stayed away from home before. What should they do?
Scenario Five

A new music teacher has started teaching guitar, drums and piano lessons after school and a child has been offered the opportunity to learn one of the instruments for free. It would be once a week, for an hour. At the moment they like going home, chilling out and playing on their computer after school. What should they do?

Scenario Six

A child has seen a poster about a new club starting in their area, which looks great. They don't know where it is, when it is, how much it costs or whether their parents will let them go though. What should they do?

Scenario Seven

A child loves playing chess, but they have no one at home to play with and there is no chess club at school. They just don't get the opportunity to ever play. What should they do?
